

FEMINIST SCIENCE FICTION

GWS 495FSF
(#21054)
Fall 2025

Do you enjoy stories that imagine and explore the possibilities of the future?! Are you interested in tales of aliens, robots, technology, and space exploration? Do you ever wonder what science fiction has to say about gender? If so, enroll in Feminist Science Fictions! In this seminar we will explore science fiction created by women, women of color, and nonbinary writers. We will engage novels, comics, and films that explore how creators use science fiction to help us think about and reimagine both historical and ongoing conversations about gender, race, and sexuality, and equity in our world.

Tuesday and Thursday
10 AM - 11:15 AM
JR 134

This course is also available as an elective for English majors and minors through course substitutions.